

Johnson Class X

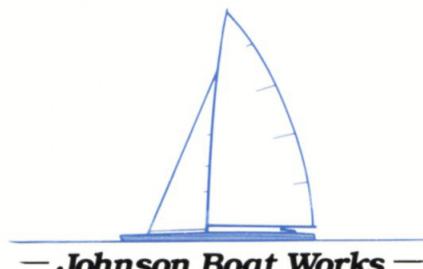

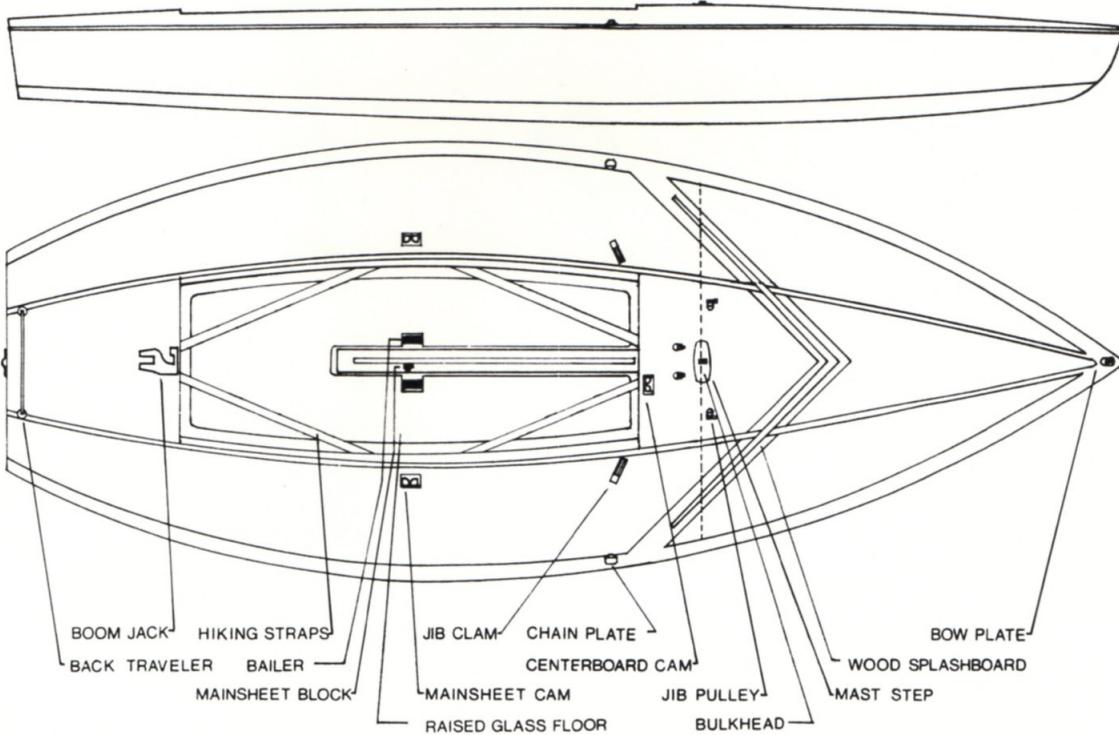

Youth Training Boat for Competitive Sailing

Johnson Boat Works built the first Class X Sailboat in 1932. Over the years, thousands of sailors have learned the fundamentals of sailing in this stable, hard-chine centerboard boat. Many camps throughout the Midwest have based their entire youth sailing program around the popular Class X Boat. The Class X is the official youth racing class sanctioned by the ILYA. For the young competitive sailor, organized racing fleets have been established in the Midwest with many regattas held throughout the summer. Because of the versatility, durability and wide appeal of the X Boat, the resale value has become legendary.
